FOREWORD.

The Bureau of Navigation, in publishing this list of those who died in the Naval Service during the World War, desires to take advantage of the occasion and to express its high appreciation of the patriotism, devotion, and loyalty of those citizens of the country who have willingly given their lives to its service.

To the bereaved ones it wishes to express its deepest sympathy in the losses they have sustained and to offer them the comforting thought that the departed ones have died nobly, and their memories will ever be held in sacred esteem by their surviving comrades and by all citizens who appreciate the services rendered by those who have served in their country's defense.

THOS. WASHINGTON,
Chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

WASHINGTON, D. C.,
March 17, 1920.
